

Medicaid Changes and the Qualified Income Trust: What You Need to Know

The Medicaid program now requires certain individuals who receive Medicaid long-term care services and who have income over the Medicaid limit to deposit the excess income into a Qualified Income Trust (QIT) if they want to keep their Medicaid coverage and services. The QIT applies to people enrolled in Ohio's Medicaid waiver programs, including the PASSPORT and Assisted Living Waivers.

What is a Qualified Income Trust (QIT)? Do I Need One?

A Qualified Income Trust (QIT), also known as a “Miller Trust” is a legal arrangement that can help you become or remain eligible for Medicaid. In order to receive Medicaid long-term care services, your income must be below the Medicaid limit set by the State of Ohio. The current monthly income limit is $_____. If your income is above this amount, you must deposit the excess income into a QIT to stay or to become eligible for Medicaid long-term care services (including services through the PASSPORT and Assisted Living Waivers). Money in the QIT can be used to pay for certain expenses.

To be valid in the State of Ohio, a QIT must:

- Include your income only. It cannot contain a spouse's income, income from other relatives or other assets.
- Be irrevocable. Once the trust is established, it cannot be changed or canceled.
- Name the State of Ohio as the beneficiary. The State of Ohio is required to recover Medicaid payments made on an individual's behalf.

How Can the Money in the QIT Be Used ?

According to the Ohio Department of Medicaid, money in your QIT can be used to pay for:

- Incurred medical expenses;
- Monthly personal or maintenance needs allowance (applies to assisted living/nursing home residents);
- Bank fees associated with the QIT's maintenance; and
- Patient liability, if applicable.

Medicaid & Qualified Income Trusts (QITs)

What happens to any money left in my QIT if I move to a nursing home or die?

- The QIT requirement also applies to Medicaid recipients who reside or receive services in a nursing facility. If you move to a nursing facility, your QIT remains in effect and goes with you.
- A QIT is irrevocable. That means it remains in effect until you die. The State of Ohio is the primary beneficiary of the QIT, therefore, any money left in the QIT when you die is paid to the state, up to the amount Medicaid paid for your care.

Is there a deadline to create a QIT? Yes. The deadline depends on your Medicaid status.

1. Currently enrolled: If you are currently enrolled in Medicaid, you have until your next redetermination date in _____ to meet the requirement. There will be no changes to your Medicaid until that time.

2. New enrollment: If you are enrolling in Medicaid for the first time, you will need to create a QIT immediately in order to receive Medicaid services. It is important to understand that you are not eligible for Medicaid until the QIT has been created and your excess income has been deposited into the QIT. Your Medicaid coverage will be effective on the first day of the month in which the QIT was created and funded. Here's an example:

- If you file your Medicaid application on September 25 and create and fund your QIT on September 27, your Medicaid coverage will be effective on September 1.
- If you file your Medicaid application on September 25 but wait until October 4 to create and fund your QIT, your Medicaid coverage is effective October 1.

3. Pending Enrollment: If you applied for Medicaid prior to August 1 but received approval after August 1, you will have until your _____ redetermination date to create the QIT.

How do I create a QIT?

A QIT is a legal, irrevocable (can't be cancelled) document. The Ohio Department of Medicaid has hired Automated Health Systems (AHS) to answer questions and help you create a QIT. You are not required to use AHS to create your QIT. If you choose not to use AHS, we recommend that you seek other legal assistance. Buckeye Hills Regional Council staff cannot answer questions about QITs or help you create one.

I'm Confused. Who Can I Contact for Help?

It is understandable that you might have questions or concerns about this change. Unfortunately, Buckeye Hills Regional Council staff are not qualified to answer questions related to a QIT or to help you create a QIT. We recommend that you contact Automated Health Systems (AHS) or Pro Seniors to answer questions and help you create a QIT.
